P R E F A C E .

THE material for the name list here published formed the basis of my dissertation "Die Personennamen in den Urkunden der Hammurabi-Dynastie," published in Munich, summer of 1902. A considerable portion of the two years that have since elapsed has been devoted to a thorough reinvestigation of all the material, and this has resulted in a number of corrections in the readings as well as in the interpretation of some of the names. At the same time the material has been restricted: all names from documents of questionable date have been excluded from the list. This enables us to discuss the problems involved with more certainty. Names taken from undated documents which, however, for palæographical and other reasons, belong to the period of the first dynasty of Babylon, have been used for comparison in the notes referring to the name-elements. Concerning 21 undated, but distinctly datable, texts see Introduction, p. 42.

During the course of my work it became more and more desirable to collate a number of names from the originals, whenever the copies seemed doubtful, and when, on the basis of parallel passages, I hoped to determine the character better, or to see more than the first editor had seen. This collation was made during July and August of 1903. It gives me great pleasure publicly to extend my warmest thanks to Dr. E. A. Wallis Budge and Prof. Dr. Friedrich Delitzsch, the Curators of the Babylonian Collections in the British and Berlin Museums, for their great kindness in facilitating this work. About 300 tablets were collated in London and about 40 in Berlin, whereby a considerable number of corrections was gained. Where I differ essentially from the reading of the first editions, I have indicated my collation of the original by an exclamation mark (!).

I have for the first time tried to give the translation of the names wherever it seemed possible, making it a rule, however, to translate only names which I consider as unabbreviated. Some of these translations are provisional and will be gladly set aside as soon as better ones are offered. But it has seemed advisable to give sometimes doubtful translations by way of suggestion, that, perhaps, other Assyriologists may be led to a right conclusion.

In spite of all efforts to interpret the different names I have had to leave a considerable number unexplained. To these I desire to call the special attention of Assyriologists. I have reserved the first line of each name in the name list for the name itself and its explanation. In case the latter is not offered, space has been left for a future translation or comparison, etc.

In conclusion, I wish to express my sincere thanks to all those who have taken an interest in my work during the course of its preparation. Beside Professor F. Hommel, under whom I began this work, and to whom I submit this volume as a small token of sincere friendship and gratitude, I extend my most heartfelt thanks to my friends, Professor Albert T. Clay, of this University, and Dr. Enno Littmann, of Princeton University, for their constant encouragement as well as for valuable advice and various suggestions. Professor Clay has been kind enough to place at my disposal his extended collections of Babylonian personal names, and particularly the name Index of his most interesting volume on Administrative Archives from the Temple Library of Nippur at the Time of the Cassite Rulers, now ready for the press. The names occurring in this volume have been referred to, for brevity, as "Cassite" (names). To Dr. Littmann I am especially indebted in connection with the West-Semitic names, most of which we discussed together during delightful hours spent in Princeton and Philadelphia. Some comparisons which he suggested have been indicated by the letters "E. L." in the name list. To the editor I owe several suggestions, most of which I received when reading the second proof, beside valuable advice as to the arrangement of the lists. I am very much indebted, also, to Dr. Leopold Messerschmidt, assistant in the "Vorderasiatische Abteilung der Königlichen Museen," in Berlin, who with unceasing kindness collated for me additional passages of the Berlin texts; and to Professor Morris Jastrow, Jr., for his most valuable and always ready aid as Librarian of our University, as well as for a number of references concerning the deities that are used as name-elements. Additional material and suggestions from the editor's pen will be found throughout the name list, enclosed in square brackets and designated by the letters "Ed." In cases where editor and author differ, it must be left with Assyriologists to decide.

Finally, my thanks are due to the Provost of the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. C. C. Harrison, the generous founder of the Harrison Research Fellowship in Assyriology, and to the Vice-Provost, Dr. Edgar F. Smith, for the personal interest which they have taken in my book; also to Mr. Eckley Brinton Coxe, Jr., who very kindly furnished the means for its publication, and to Mrs. Cornelius Stevenson, until recently President of the Board of Managers of the Department of Archæology.

My friend, Dr. W. Ellery Leonard, has kindly aided me in revising the English of the proof sheets.

After the manuscript had been set up in type, I found a tablet in the Khabaza collection (C. B. M. 1629) which corrects the reading of the name Bungun(?)-ila, quoted in the Introduction, p. 43. This tablet is dated in the year Bu-nu-t(d)ah-tu-un-i-la lugal-e, showing the same name in the oath-formula.

The third sign, read gu(?) by Dr. King (Letters, III, p. 220. n. 16) and Dr. Daiches (Rechtsurkunden, p. 27, n. 2), is the early Babylonian variant of the dah, tah sign (cf. Delitzsch, *A. L.*⁴, p. 126, No. 122). Thus we have the two readings Buntahun-ila and Buntu-tah-tun-ila. As to the meaning of this apparently foreign name (cf. the West-Semitic names composed with ila) I can offer no reasonable suggestion at present.

In this connection I desire to call the attention of Assyriologists to another tablet of the Khabaza collection that is of historical interest. In the contract C. B. M. 28, dated in the year ma(?)-ki-ja(?)-nin-bi Mal-ge-a^{ki} (fourth year of Hammurabi?), we find the oath-formula nish ⁴*Marduk*, Hammurabi ù ⁴*Shamshi(-shi)-*⁴*Adad*. It is the only tablet after Sumu-la-ilu's time in which we find the name of more than one ruler mentioned in the oath-formula. Now the name Shamshi-Adad does not once occur in our list of early Babylonian personal names, but is familiar to us from the earliest records of rulers in Assyria. Therefore it seems suggestive to assume that we have here, for some reason or another, the name of the Assyrian king (or patesi) mentioned alongside of the king of Babylonia. Compare, for this, L. W. King, Records of the Reign of Tukulti-Ninib I, p. 55 f. It is to be hoped that some day the German excavations at Ashur, which already have so largely extended our knowledge of the earliest Assyrian history, will furnish us the material for a clearer understanding of the relations between Babylonia and Assyria at the time of the Hammurabi dynasty. Both of the C. B. M. tablets mentioned above are to be published in the near future in Part 1 of Volume VI of Series A (Cuneiform Texts) of "The Babylonian Expedition of the University of Pennsylvania."

THE EDITOR.

I. INTRODUCTION.

Personal names are more than mere labels. It is a feature of our present age with its immense technical achievements and the small importance of the single individual among the millions and hundreds of millions, that human beings, as workmen in mills and factories, are simply counted and called by numbers. It is in accordance with this fact that most of our names are no longer understood by those who bear them. Who connects nowadays any meaning with names like William, John, Robert, etc.? It takes a philologist to explain their original meanings. And besides these old personal names, borne by our fathers and ancestors, it is becoming more and more a fashion, at least among the English-speaking nations, to change names which originally designated a family, e.g., Franklin, Kent, etc., into personal names, thus abandoning every effort to trace a connection between the name and its bearer. They are only means of distinguishing one person from another, nothing else, and our ability to form new names is so limited, that we have to give a child two or three names in order to avoid constant confusion. It was different in times gone by, when names were still living, as it were, coined anew each day, and referred by their meanings to the occasion upon which they were given. These names, preserved through centuries and millenniums, tell us to-day about their bearers. They tell what they accomplished and what they believed; they tell how they lived and suffered; they even allow us sometimes to catch a glimpse of their most intimate every-day life. We have only to listen and to understand.

How far this is true of the Semitic personal names of the so-called Hammurabi period it is difficult to say. Were names at that time still chosen according to the special circumstances, or were they simply handed down through the centuries, the boy bearing the name of his grandfather, just as he bore that of his ancestor, etc.? The fact that names like Narâm-Sin, "Beloved of Sin," and Itti-Bêl, "With Bel.....," the latter even being abbreviated from a fuller form, occur almost 2000 years before the Hammurabi dynasty, speaks very much in favor of the second view. But still it seems that the meaning of the name was yet understood at this time.

The later custom of treating the compound name like any other noun, by attaching to it the case ending (cf. Hilprecht in B. E., Vol. IX, p. 24), is never found (but cf. Etel-bû(m), p. 9). The form of a sentence or status constructus connection remains the same, in whatever case the name may stand, and only the abbreviated and hypocoristic forms, which have become mere common nouns, take the nominative, genitive, etc., endings. In the case of Ahushina, son of ÛR-RA-gâmîl, we are even tempted to assume that his parents referred to actual conditions when giving him this curious name. We happen to know the names of two of his sisters, Ittâni and Mazabatum, and it may very well be that, when he was born as the third child, the happy father exclaimed: "Now finally the girls have a brother!" The bulk of the names, however, gives us the impression of a more or less conventional system of name giving. The extensive use of names containing deities or their equivalents presupposes a rather highly developed civilization and a sacerdotal régime with well-established cults of the single gods throughout the country. Thus the possibility of name formations is distinctly limited, and we do not find such an overwhelming abundance of forms as in the Arabic nomenclature, where altogether different social conditions permit the arbitrary creating of new names even up to the present day.

By far the greater part of the early Babylonian names that have been preserved to us are names of men,¹ the ratio of masculine and feminine names in our list being about 9 to 1. Since the determinatives which in later texts indicate the sexes are by no means used regularly,² and, on the other hand, some names are known as having been used for both sexes,³ it is sometimes difficult or even impossible to decide whether we have before us the name of a man or a woman. Even the word māru following a name is not an absolute proof that it is masculine. As māru originally meant "child" without reference to the sex, it is found, although rarely, after feminine names.⁴ Some rules, however, which in general hold true, can be set forth provisionally.

The verbal form in a masculine name is masculine, even if connected with a goddess. We have Idin-Damu, Damu-nāšir, Ishtar-ishmeshu,⁵ not Taddin-Damu or Damu-nāširat, Ishtar-tashmeshu. On the other hand, in names of women we find the feminine verbal form, even if referring to a male deity. Cf. Taddin-Nunu (besides masculine Idin-Nunu), Tarām-Rammān, and perhaps Tewir-E-SAG-ILA. But since even these rules have exceptions, it is not impossible that in the list of masculine names one or the other may be found which really belonged to a Babylonian woman.

² For convenience sake we have put in our lists an f before every feminine name, even where it is not written in the text. For the use of the perpendicular wedge before feminine names, cf. Daiches, Rechtsurkunden, p. 10, n. 2.

³ Cf. Bêlâ, Il(u)btîsha, Mannashu, Matatum, Rîsh-Shamash, Sin-rabi(GAL), Sin-inguranni. [The same peculiarity is also found in the later Assyrian inscriptions. Thus Ad-ra-hu-û or Ad-ra-hi-i, A-bi-ia-ah-ia, Abi-ra-mi (or mu), etc., are names borne by men and women alike, in texts published by Johns, Assyr. Deeds and Documents.—Ed.]

⁴ Cf. Yushutum (the text has the masculine determinative, but note shewiri-sha!) mār Sin-putram, H 102 : 5f.

⁵ Whether we ought to read Il(u)-bî-Aja instead of Ilât-bî-Aja is a question which at present I am unable to decide. [Cf. my note in the "List"—Ed.]

In spite of all that can be said about the comparatively high standing of the woman in the social life of Hammurabi's time, we must confess that the Babylonians, just as we find it almost everywhere else,¹ wanted to have a son rather than a daughter. Whereas the desire to have a son, or the joy after the birth of a son, is expressed by names like Sin-aḥam-idinnam, "Sin has given a brother;" Sin-bêl-ablim, "Sin is the lord of the son;" Aḥam-arshi (irshû, nershû), "I (they, we) got a brother;" Aḥam-kallim, "Show a brother;" Aqbi-aḥu(nî), "I said: It is a (our) brother,"² we find no parallel names referring to the birth of a daughter.³

A name is found either alone or followed by "son of.....," "daughter of....." In the latter case, as a rule, the name of the father is given; sometimes, however, especially as regards the women, the name of the mother. In rare cases the name of the grandfather is found. Thus in Sm 19:32 ÛR-RA-gâmîl is called son of Shamaja, who, as we know otherwise (H 4:17), was the son of Ishkî-itti-ilija. In H 99:27f., however, apparently the same ÛR-RA-gâmîl is called son of Ishkî-itti-ilija. It has to be noted that in the whole early Babylonian literature,⁴ so far as I

² [I regard this interpretation as doubtful and should rather explain the name as עֶקֶב-אֲחִי. Cf. Aq-bi-ilî (with syncope of the second vowel) alongside of A-ga-bi-ilî (or Aq-qab-bi-ilî) and Ad-ri-ilî alongside of A-dar-ilî. Cf. my note to Clay, B. E., Vol. X, p. 37, n. 1.—Ed.]

⁴ Even in the later time such cases are exceedingly rare (cf. e.g., the names quoted by Hilprecht, B. E., Vol. IX, p. 29, Bêl-ittannu aplû sha Bêl-ittannu; Ninib-nâdin aplû sha Ninib-nâdin; and Bêl-abu-uşur mâr Bêl-abu-uşur, quoted by Clay, B. E., Vol. X), and may have to be explained like ÛR-RA-gâmîl mâr Ishkî-itti-ilija above. Cf. also Vol. IX, p. 15. [In Const. Ni. 562:18 we read Bêl-nâdin-shumu aplû sha Bêl-nâdin-shumu.—Ed.]

can see, not a single case is found in which a person would bear exactly the same name as the father or mother, a fact which evidently has to be connected with some kind of religious superstition.¹

The full Semitic² personal names in the Hammurabi period may be divided, according to their contents, into three groups, viz., those which contain:

1. A (complete or incomplete) sentence—

(a) referring directly to the birth and without religious character (Aham-arshi, "I got a brother;" Shumu-lîši, "May a son come forth").³

(b) directly or indirectly connected with the birth and throughout of religious character (Putur-Sin, "Loosen, oh Sin!"; Sin-

² The number of Sumerian names in the documents of this period is very small. Most of those which appear in a Sumerian garment are only ideographical writings of Semitic names and have been given in the list in their Semitic forms. The only names which seem to be genuine Sumerian are BI-TA-TA, BU-DA-DA[?—Ed.], GAL-SHE-KI(?), GAR-KAL-LA, MU-AN-MU, NIN-SIG-GA and NIN-A-ZU.

³ [I am inclined to attribute a certain religious character to this apparently abbreviated name. Cf. e.g. Ana-Shamash-lîši (quoted by Dr. Ranke in his list) and the common Neo-Babylonian name Lu-uš-(šu)-a-na-nûri, written also Lu-uššu(UD-DU)a-na-nûri, abbreviated from a name like Lu-uš-šu-ana-nûri-Marduk (Strassmaier, Nabonidos, 635: 1), or Lu-ša-ana-nûri-Marduk (Strassmaier, Cyrus, 351: 4). Cf. also the hypocor. name Lu-uššu(written UT-TU)-û-a (Evetts, Nerigl. 67: 4). The full name seems to have been Shumu-lîši(or lîši)-ana-nûri-Shamash (or any other god).—Ed.]

ishmeanni, "Sin has heard me;" Shamash-bêl-ilê, "Shamash is the lord of the gods").

2. A status constructus formation, designating the child as regards its relation—

(a) to the deity (Warad-Shamash, "Servant of Shamash").

(b) to its origin (Mâr-Sippar, "Sipparite") or birthday (Mâr-ûm-XX, "Son of the 20th day").¹

3. A single substantive, designating the child (Ahushunu, "Their brother"; Elmêshum, "Precious stone"; Shêlibum, "Fox").

The names referring directly to the birth or origin of a person, without a religious character (1a and 2b), and those designating the child by a single substantive (3) are comparatively scarce and probably go back to a more primitive age. To the examples given in my Diss., pp. 36f. and 45, I have now to add:

Aham-irshû....."They got a brother."

Aham-nershi....."We got a brother."

Ahî-kîlîm....."See my brother!"²

Adi(u)-anniam....."Unto this one"(?).³

Mâr-isîni (or Mâr-Isîni)....."Son of the feast" (or "Son of the City of Isin", "Isinite").

Sakkum, Zukkukum....."The deaf one."⁴

Diqqum....."Little one" (? cf. Daqqum).

Mâshum....."Twin brother."

¹ That these names originally are sentences also, "he (or she) is" being supplemented, is shown by names like Qîshu-shû, "He is a present," aside of Qîsh-Nunu, "(He is a) present of Nunu," and the later names Sha-Nabû (Ishtar)-shû, "He belongs to Nebo (Ishtar)," compared with the names Sha-ili, Sha-Ishbara, etc., found in our list below.

² Or, "My brother (used as a deity), see!"?

⁴ Thus, instead of Amêlu-tummumu, Diss., p. 45.

Ruttum	"Friend." ¹
Ajašum	"Mouse."(?)
Immerum , Immertum	"Lamb."
Kalâtumum , Kalâmtum	"Young lamb."
Ařidum	" Stechdorn ."(?)
Hulâlum	A certain precious stone.
Dig(q)di-(g)qum	A certain bird.
Arulum	? cf. erullu , a certain bird.

The majority of the full names are those characterized under 1b and 2a. For their formation and religious contents cf. my Dissertation, pp. 12-34.

Alongside of these full names we find a great number of shortened forms with and without hypocoristic affixes,² which are entirely equal in value to the full names, and in many cases without doubt were no longer felt as having been shortened.

The fact that sometimes the same person is called by the full and the shortened name interchangeably³ settles it once for all that apparently original names, the single elements of which are found as parts of compound names, also have to be considered as shortened forms.

This was stated already in my Dissertation, but may be repeated here. For what is true of the early Babylonian names is in all probability equally true of the early names of all the Semitic languages, and consequently this consideration is of fundamental importance for a correct understanding of the early Semitic personal names in general.

² Shortened names having a hypocoristic affix have been designated as "hypocoristic," all other shortened ones as "abbreviated."

³ Cf. Diss., p. 38. To the three examples given there we have now to add Jasharum = Izi-shar, Ilâ = Ilu-nâšir (cf. Peiser, K.B., IV, p. 21, note), Usâtîm = Ilî-usâtîm, Zilâlî = Zilâlum-gâmil, Wardum = Warad-Ishtar (at least very probable, cf. the traces in Strassm., Warka, 68 : 12b). It is very rare that the order of the elements is changed. The only example known to me is Ishktî-itti-ili-ja having the variant Itti-ili-ishktî.

The view forming the basis of Delitzsch's Prolegomena, p. 199ff., according to which Pirhu ("Offspring"), Etellu ("Lord"), Rêmat ("Belovedness"), Ahulapia ("O may I!"), etc., and the corresponding Hebrew equivalents can be regarded as unabbreviated names, has therefore to be definitely abandoned.¹

The shortened names deserve special attention, as they are of such frequent occurrence even in the early Babylonian time.

The views expressed in my Dissertation (pp. 37-44) have since undergone essential changes, and I shall therefore try, on the basis of the entire material now at our disposal, briefly to sum up once more what I have to say about the shortened names of the early Babylonians.

Little can be added concerning the group of names, which are mere vocative abbreviations, formed by cutting off one of the elements of the compound name without inner or outer changes, except the often added nominative ending u(m).² Examples of the different kinds (cf. also Diss., pp. 27, 34f., 39ff.) are:

Nûr-ili.....(cf. Nûr-ili-nâwir)
Šili-Shamash.....(cf. Rapash-šili-Ea)
Šumma-ilu.....(cf. Šumma-ilu-lâ-ilija)
Libit.....(cf. Libit-Ishtar)

¹ For the right explanation see Johns, Secondary Formations, in the Amer. Journal of Semitic Languages and Literatures, Vol. XVIII, pp. 152 and 162. If we want to translate names like Nidintâ, it would have to be "My (dear) Nidintu," not "Oh, my gift." Cf. p. 13.

² It is worth noting that theophorous names never are abbreviated so that the child bears the divine name itself. We find IAjatum, Sinatum, Sint, Šamshija as personal names, but not Sin, Šamash, IAja. Only concerning foreign gods an exception seems to have been made. Cf. Teshhûm (alongside of Ibni-Tishhû) and Zamzum (alongside of Samsu-iluna, etc.). Marduk [and Ash-shur—Ed.] as a person name is late. Cf. II R. 63 : 18c., and Hilpr. and Clay, B. E., IX.

Abuni	(cf. Shamash-abuni)
Nidnatum	(cf. Nidnat-Sin)
Adalal(lum)	(cf. Sin-adalal)
Itêbum	(cf. Itêb-libashu)
Etel-bû(m)	(cf. Etel-bî-Marduk) ¹
Mutêr-gimilliya	(from Marduk-m.-g. , cf. Del., Hw. , p. 198b, or a similar name not yet found)

An appendix to these names is formed by those in which the omitted name of the deity is referred to only by the nominal suffix. Examples are Ṭâb-šilashu, etc. Cf. Diss., p. 35.

Another phenomenon may be mentioned here, which really stands between the mere abbreviated names and the hypocoristic forms. I mean the names Iddinum (cf. Idin-) and Innibu (cf. Inîb-), to which perhaps Tabbilum may be added.² In these names the second radical has been doubled, apparently because of the vocative emphasis of the call.³

The abbreviated feminine names have been formed in two different ways. Either they are shortened from compound feminine names, e.g.,

¹Bashlum	(cf. ¹Ishtar-bashtî)
¹Bêlitum	(cf. ¹Aja-bêlit-nishî)
¹Bêltum	(cf. ¹Bêltî-mâgirat)
¹Erishtum	(cf. ¹Erishtî-Aja)
¹Lamazî, ¹Lamazum	(cf. ¹Shamash-lamazî) or the feminine name has been formed, by mechanical addition of the feminine ending, from the shortened masculine name (which, however, has not yet been found in every case). Thus we have:

¹ Both are found as variants for the name of the same person, C. B. M., 23 : 14.

² Cf. also Binniia and Rabbiia, which perhaps belong to names like Bin-Nârum, Rabi-šilashu.

³ Cf. p. 16, and Lidzbarski, Semitische Kosenamen.

¹ Unnubtum.....	?
¹ Waqartum.....	(cf. Waqar-abum , Ali-waqrum)
¹ Zikurtum.....	(cf. Zikrum)

The only example of such a secondary formation of a feminine name from a compound masculine name, that thus far has occurred to me, is 'Aliwaqartum, beside Ali-waqrūm.

In addition to these shortened names we find even at this early period several groups of hypocoristic forms.

An important paper on Semitische Kosenamen has been published recently by Dr. Lidzbarski in his Ephemeris für Semitische Epigraphik, I, pp. 1-23. We find there a great many later Semitic hypocoristic names, taken especially from Talmudic, Syriac and Arabic documents. Those with outer changes, which form the bulk of the whole material (pp. 7-19), are arranged systematically according to their different vocalic or consonantal endings. As Dr. Lidzbarski thinks that the emphasis of the call, expressed by the different vowels (or the nasal consonants n and m) attached to the shortened name, has originally caused this abundance of hypocoristic forms, he does not search for a special explanation of the single endings. This view gained from the later Semitic names does not seem to hold true concerning our early Babylonian material. If Dr. Lidzbarski were right, we should expect to find in our list a great number of names ending in the long vowels. But this is not the case. Counting them all, we have A-ab-ba-a, A-ap-pa-a, A-ba-a, A-da-a, A-at-la-a, Be-ja-a, Be-la-a ('Be-la-a), E-ab?-ba-a, I-la-a, I-si-ma-na-a, 'Ku-na-a, Lu-lu-ḥa-a, Sa-la-a,—At-e-e, E-si-e, Be(i)-li-i, I-id-di-i, I-si-i, Si-li-i, Sini-i (written Sin-ni-i), Za-ba-bi-i,—Ja-bi-ba-at-nu-ū, Ja-ab-su-ū, Ni-in-nu-ū, *Sa-qa-aḥ-ia-nu-ū*¹—that is twenty-five names among a number of more than two thousand. Besides, of these twenty-five some (e.g., Isimanā, Luluḥā, Jabibatnū, Saqah-tanū), in all probability, are not hypocoristic forms, and of the others only eight (A-ab-ba-a, A-ap-pa-a, A-ba-a, Be-la-a, I-la-a,

Sa-la-a, Be(i)-li-i, Sini-i) can be claimed as being formed from well-known name elements.¹ [As to Luluhâ, cf. Ed. Preface.]

Instead of these long vocalic endings we find a number of different affixes being used for the mass of the hypocoristic names. These affixes are, as a rule, attached to a shortened name (masculine or feminine) containing only one element. Exceptions are very scarce. Cf. perhaps Bêlilânûm, p. 13, Zâniqbîja, M.A.P., 97:24, and the names Ikû(n)bîsha, Il(u)bîsha, p. 20.

1. Names ending in -ja.

To the examples given Diss., p. 42, we may add here:

Adaja	(cf. Adatum , Adi-mati-ili , etc.)
Danja	(cf. Dan-ÛR-RA , etc.)
Eja	(cf. E-Ishtar , E-Shamash-mannu) [?—Ed.]
Eteja ²	(cf. Etel-Shamash , etc.)
Gimeja ²	(cf. Gimil-Sin , etc.)
Matija	(cf. Matâni , Mati-ilu , Adi-mati-ilî)
Pakaja	(cf. Paka-ila , Pakusha)
Ribaja	(cf. Ribam-ili , Ribatum)
Shubija	(cf. Shubisha)

Zabaja	(cf. Zabum , Zabi-MAR-TU)
Zabbija	(cf. Zabbum)
Zasija	(cf. Zasa , Zazatum)
Zikilaja	(cf. Zikilum , Ziklum)

¹ Another excellent paper on Secondary Formations among Assyrian Names has been published by the Rev. C. H. W. Johns in the Amer. Journal of Semitic Languages and Literatures (Vol. XVIII, pp. 149-166 and 246-253).

² In these two cases we have a Mouillierung of the letter l before j. For this phenomenon occurring also in Sumerian cf. H 86:15 and Si 46:15, where MAL-MAL is prolonged by JA, instead of the usual A. From this we see that it was pronounced MALMAJJA. A case of Verschleifung of the r has been noted, Diss., p. 42 (Imguja = Imgurja). [Cf. my note to Eteja, List—Ed.]

The affix -ja is attached to the remaining element of a shortened name. This element may have the case ending or not. Thus the names ending in -a-a and -ú-a (cf. Diss., p. 46)¹ will probably have to be explained as ending in aja and uja (uwa). I cannot see why this affix, even in its original meaning, should be anything else but the nominal suffix of the first person.² Instead of the long Imgur-Shamash the mother calls shortly Imgur! or Im-gurru! But if she wants to express her affection for the boy, she tenderly says: Imguja, i.e., "my Imgur" or "Imgur, my dear."

2. Names ending in -ân.

To the examples given Diss., p. 43, we have to add:

Anânum.....(cf. Anatum, Anu-bi-NIN-SHAH, Il-anum) [For the Editor's view cf. List.]

Azânum.....(cf. ʾAzatum)

Ilûzânum (if not Anzanum!)(cf. ʾAmur-ilûzu)

ʾMatâni.....(cf. ʾMatija, Mati-ihu, etc.)

Samânum.....(cf. Samum, Samu-abum, etc.)

Zabânum.....(cf. Zabum, Zabi-MAR-TU), and perhaps Bêlilânum, which might be an aphæretic formation from names like Shamash-bêl-ilê.

The comparison with forms like mîrânu, "young dog" (cf. mîru), mûrânu, "young lion" (cf. mûru), lidânu, "young bird" (cf. lidu), suggests a diminutive character for this formation.

Since we find corresponding names in the other Semitic languages also, it might be inferred that the diminutive force of the affix -ân (ôn, ûn, în) goes back to the earliest Semitic times. *ʾLamazâni*³ then would be "Little Lamazi" or "Lamazichen."

³ It has to be noted that the feminine names with this suffix all end in -i, even in the nominative.

3. Names ending in -atum.

Upon this group of names Dr. Lidzbarski (l.c., p. 19) has thrown the long desired light in supposing -atum to be also a special hypocoristic affix.

Here we have to quote:

- A-ab-ba-tum*.....(cf. A-ab-ba-tâbum)

Zahlatum	(cf. זעל, Ibn Doreid)
¹ Zazatum	(cf. Zasiĵa , ³ Zasa)

The above list shows that -atum is attached to masculine as well as to feminine names. I am unable to find an explanation of this affix on purely Babylonian ground. But an affix -t is very commonly attached to Arabic personal names. In the index of Safaitic personal names in Dussaud et Macler, Mission, not less than sixty cases¹ appear in which we find (beside the other common affixes (ā)n and j, and the merely shortened forms of compound names) a name element prolonged by -t as an independent form of a masculine name. I do not doubt that we have to connect our -atum with this Arabic -(a)t.² The fact that it is rather rarely found attached to the so-called "West-Semitic" elements of our names (cf. Jadihatum, Jashuhatum) can hardly be quoted against this suggestion. The "West-Semitic" names in our documents are far less numerous than genuine Babylonian names; and, besides, a number of the names ending in -atum, the root of which we have not yet recognized, may go back to "West-Semitic" origin. Nor does the opposite fact, that we find -atum connected with genuine Babylonian elements, speak against our supposition. It is possible that this affix originally was brought to Babylonia by the invading "Western-Semites," who had been entirely naturalized at the time of the Hammurabi dynasty. It is noticeable, on the other hand, that these names, so common in this special period, later disappear almost entirely from the lists of Babylonian and Assyrian names.

¹ Shamashshatum (Diss., p. 45) has to be removed from this list, since all passages clearly give Shamash-ta-tum. Pinches reads Uttatum, but the pronunciation of DINGIR-UD as Shamash (Shamshi) in our names is established beyond doubt (cf. List of deities), and why should we make an exception in this case? I have at present no satisfactory explanation for this name, but will call attention to the name Tatim (genitive) which may have been abbreviated from it.

² With Mouillierung: Sijatum (Zijatum), cf. Diss., p. 45.

³ Cf. also Zaziĵa, Strassm., Warka, 95 : 8, and Sasiĵa.

For an explanation of this affix it must be said, first, that the a in all probability was short.³ This is suggested especially by the form of the later Arabic names, like Udhaina(t), compared with Safaitic אֲדַנָּה (cf. Dussaud et Macler, l.c.).

² For the occurrence of this -t even in South-Arabic names cf. עברת (Hom-mel, Südarab. Chrest.).

³ The three cases known to me in which the a is written long (Awijatum, Innabatum and Nidnatum) will have to be explained otherwise. The lengthening of the vowel there most probably is due to a vocative emphasis. Cf. Warazā beside the usual Waraza, Aḥijā beside the usual Aḥija, and the before-mentioned forms Iddinum and Innibu (cf. p. 9), in which also for the sake of emphasis the second radical has been doubled. Nidnatum could be either a hypocoristic formation on -atum from names like Nidni-Sin or merely abbreviated from Nidnat-Sin.

The comparison with the Arabic forms jā abati, jā ummati (Lidzbarski, l.c., p. 19) seems to me very suggestive. It may be an old ending of vocative force, which only in those two forms has been preserved in the later language. Then we would have to understand, e.g., Nûratum as "Oh, Nûr!" or "Helloo, Nûr!"

4. Names ending in -jatum and -atija.

If -a um has been rightly explained as an (originally "West-Semitic," more specially Arabic) hypocoristic affix, the "scheinbaren Feminina zum Kosesuffix -ja" (Diss., p. 45) also can be defined without difficulty. We have before us the well-known phenomenon of double affixes—not surprising at all at a time and place where two different tribes had become mixed with each other. The Babylonians used especially the affix -ja, the "Western-Semites" brought along their -atum. Now both were thrown together. To the latter Abija did not yet sound quite like a pet name—they changed it into Abijatum. On the other hand, the Babylonian mother who had married one of the foreign immigrants did not like Ishhatum as a name for her darling—she called him Ishhatija.

Thus we find:

Abijatum , Abujatum	(cf. Abija)
Adajatum	(cf. Adaja)
Ahujatum	(cf. Ahija)
Akijatum	(cf. Akija and perh. Ikkatum)
Awijatum	(cf. Awil-Sin , etc.) ¹
Azzijatum	?

Etejatum	(cf. Eteja) ¹

Ishhatija.....(cf. ḡit in South-Arabian names)⁵

Of course, here we can hardly venture longer upon a translation ("Oh my So and so!"), but we find an exact parallel in the German nursery. A boy named Friedrich at home in Bavaria is called "Friedel," but his Berlin aunt, who comes on a visit to Munich, will call him "Friedelchen."

5. Names ending in -sha.

These names have been explained formerly (Diss., p. 42) as merely abbreviated—the -sha being the feminine suffix, referring to the omitted name of a goddess. This explanation, however, ¹ Supposing that Halijaum = Halija + nominative ending -um, cf. Neo-Babylonian Ahi-ja-û, Hilprecht and Clay, B. E., Vol. IX, p. 48, n. ††.

² [Possibly through Verschleifung from Nam(w)ar-jatum, resp. Nam(w)irjatūm. —Ed.]

³ For the Verschleifung of r cf. Imguja and p. 12, n. 2. One could be inclined to explain Ubajatum as Ubaj with added -atum, but the above explanation seems to be preferable, since we have no other evidence of fu'ail forms in the names of this time.

⁴ Cf. also Zabajatum, M.A.P., 77 : 11, alongside of Zabaja.

⁵ Cf. also Burratija, Bu. 91-356 (II, 30), l. 2 and 9, Kalba(?)tija, ib., l. 22, and for the latter the names כְּלוּי (Hebrew) and כְּלִבְאִלִּים (Phœnician).

meets with one considerable difficulty: we never find -shu in a similar way attached to name elements,¹ which we certainly should expect, since the names of gods appear in our names much more frequently than those of goddesses. The suggestion of Dr. Daiches (Rechtsurkunden, p. 29) who finds in these names a deity Sha does not appeal to me very much, since we know too little about such a deity.² Thus I prefer, until further evidence, to give it here in the number of affixes.

Tarîbusha	(cf. Tarîbum , Tarîbatum , etc.)
Uku(n)bîsha (?).....	(cf. Ikû(n)bîsha)
Waraza , Warazâ	(cf. Wardija , Wardum , etc.)

For an explanation of this affix I have so far searched in vain.³

¹ How is -shu to be explained in the names Mannashu, Naḫalshu?

² The fact that in the names Waraza and Libizza (M.A.P., 97 : 26) the name of this deity Sha would have been subjected to the laws of phonetic changes cannot be quoted against Dr. Daiches' view. Cf. Sinatum, Sinjatum, Sijatum.

The a in all probability is short. For an explanation of the once occurring Warazâ, cf. p. 16, n. 3. It has to be noticed, however, that in cases like Ikû(n)bîsha and Il(u)bîsha, we would have the affix added to a stem consisting of two elements, which is almost without parallel in the other affixes (cf. p. 12).

Beside these formations with hypocoristic affixes, we find comparatively few cases in which the endearing element has been expressed by an inner change of the root.

The emphatic doubling of the second radical in a few instances has already been mentioned (p. 9).

6. To a greater extent the form fu''ulu seems to have been used for the formation of genuine Babylonian as well as West-Semitic hypocoristica.

Thus we have:

Dulukum	(cf. Dalkum)
Gurrudum	(cf. Qardi -, - qarrad)
Hubudija	(cf. Habdi-ili)
'Hudultum	?
Humurum	(cf. חמר Del., Handw. , and Meissner, Suppl.) deity, however, is not an otherwise unknown god, as Dr. Daiches assumes, but evidently a mere abbreviation of iluSham(w)ash. For the same abbreviated form Sha is known from the Palmyr. inscriptions. Cf. especially the instructive אִמְר־שָׁא, transcribed in Greek ἀμρι-σαμσον (Lidzbarski, Handbuch, p. 222). Abbreviations of divine names, known from the Semitic proper names in general, occur also in the cuneiform inscriptions of different ages. Cf. the frequent Hu and Hi for Ahu and Ahi (also occurring in the Hammurabi period), Ad for Adad, Si for Sin, aHu-u for aIa-hu-u, etc. Cf. my remarks on this whole question in Clay, B. E., Vol. X, pp. 38, note †, and 51, note ‡. Finally it is of interest to note that side by side with the names quoted above by Dr. Ranke we actually find fuller names with Shamash instead of Sha. Cf. e.g. his Ilu-bî-Sha alongside of Ilu-bî-Shamash, Manna-Sha alongside of Mannum-ki-ma-Shamash (for the omission of ki (akt, kîma) cf. my remarks in Clay, B. E., Vol. X, p. XV), Ikûbî-Sha alongside of Ikûbî-Shamash, Kâsha-Sha alongside of Kâsha-Shamash, etc.—ED.]

⁵ Cf. Unubum, Bu. 91-380 (VIII, 26), l. 29.

⁶ For the occurrence of this hypocoristic formation also in the Neo-Babylonian time the following examples may be quoted from Hilprecht and Clay, B. E., Vol. IX: Bulluṭā (cf. -uballit-, -muballit-, etc.), Dummuq (cf. -dāmiq, Mudammīq-, etc.), Puḥḥuru, Puḥḥurā (cf. -upaḥḥir, Mupaḥḥirum), Shullumā (cf. -mushallim, Shulum-, etc.), Tukku(l)u (cf. Tākīl-, Mutakkīl-, etc.). Delitzsch (Prolegomena, p. 200, n. 3) quotes Nummuru (cf. Nāwir-, -liwir-, etc.) as a personal name. Johns (Secondary Formations, p. 165) gives Sullumu, Sullumā (cf. Silim-, -sālim, Musalimum, etc.), and cf. also Qunmunu (C.B.M., 3433, l. 27) with Itti-Bēl-ginnī.

In the names Hubudija and Ubbuqija we again have a doubling of the endearing element.

7. It must remain doubtful whether the forms ja'ál or jà'ál (a distinction which cannot be made with certainty, because of the defective writing of double consonants in the texts of the Hammurabi-time) are also represented in our list. We can at present compare only

Garûbu.....(cf. Safaît. קרב) and Natûnu.....(cf. Jantin-ilu, Bu. 88-294 (IV, 22)

which belong to the group of "West-Semitic" names.²

8. The form ju'ál might be found in Zulâgum (cf. Safaît. זלג), Munânnum (cf. Maninum) and Hunâbum, the latter of which is followed by Hunâbija, Hunâbatum, and even Hunâbatija, which forms furnish further examples for an accumulation of the endearing elements.

We have learned from this brief review of the early Babylonian hypocoristica, that—beside inner changes of the roots—certain affixes were in use, the original meaning of which is still more or less intelligible. This being so, should we not expect vestiges of these original forms in the Semitic names of later periods? Thus, e.g., I do not hesitate to place the greater part of the later hypocoristic forms ending in -î (Lidzbarski, l.c., pp. 11ff.) on a level with our names ending in -ja, and consequently trace them back to an original suffix of the first person.³ In some cases, of course, the î

² [In all probability Garûbu and Natûnu are abbreviated without any change. Cf. Na-tu-un-ili, B. E., X, p. 58, note †, and Ba-ru-ûi-ili, l.c., p. 42, n. †—Ed.]

may belong to the element, and we may have a simple abbreviation, like Abuni from Shamash-abuni. Thus perhaps in 𐎶𐎵 (Lidzbarski, l.c., p. 12), which name does not necessarily owe its origin to an analogy formation (cf. the name ʿAna-Aja-uznî in our list). The question whether the affix -ân (-ôn, -ân, -în, cf. Lidzbarski, l.c., p. 18f.) in Semitic hypocoristic names might perhaps go back to an old diminutive form has been mentioned above, and would have to be investigated more thoroughly.¹

Even among the names ending in -a (Lidzbarski, pp. 7-11) we may perhaps be able to recognize some old forms worn down in the course of time. We have called attention to the fact that a final -t (the identity of which with our -atum is highly probable) is found often as hypocoristic affix in early Arabic names. Now it has to be noted that in Lihjanic inscriptions we find apparently hypocoristic forms, which show a final -h, where the South-Arabic and Safaitic names have a final -t. Cf. Lihjanic² 𐤁𐤏𐤊𐤍 𐤂𐤈𐤊𐤍, etc., of which the name 𐤂𐤈𐤊𐤍 is of special interest, because the exactly corresponding form 𐤂𐤈𐤊𐤍 is found in Sabaeen.³ The -t seems to have been lost in the pronunciation of the Lihjanic dialect, and a graphic He appears in its place, as in the Hebrew and Arabic feminine. The name in question was in Lihjanic pronounced Da'ta, and we would have to inquire whether some of the shortened names later ending in 𐎶 or 𐎵 might not go back to this old Arabic ending -at(um).⁴

These remarks I make only as suggestions and with all reserve,

² The examples have been taken from D. H. Müller, Epigraphische Denkmäler aus Arabien, Wien, 1887, p. 91ff.

³ Müller, l.c., p. 88ff.

since larger collections from original material—except in the Babylonian line—are not at my disposal. Careful investigations in this direction will have to be made—especially concerning the early Arabic and Hebrew names—before we can trace a fairly faithful picture of the Semitic hypocoristica in general.

In dealing with the affixes -atum, -jatum and -atija we presupposed, as an historical background, a mixture of two different tribes in Babylonia at the time of the Hammurabi dynasty. For the non-Babylonian element we used the word "West-Semitic." For both we have to give now a short justification.

What is the origin of the Hammurabi dynasty, and how do we account for the numerous foreign-sounding personal names in the business documents of this time? These two questions are at present of especial interest for the students of early Babylonian history; and different scholars have given and defended very different answers to these questions.

I shall try in the following pages to sum up briefly what, according to my conception, can be gained for the solution of this problem from the personal names of the contemporaneous documents. In doing so, how far I follow the paths of other scholars (especially those of my esteemed teacher, Professor Hommel, who here, as in many other cases, has ingeniously seen the truth before others), and how far I am enabled to add observations of my own, every specialist will readily recognize.

In order to start from a solid basis for our operations it will be advisable to gather a number of Semitic names which without doubt have been read correctly, and are of Semitic origin, while at the same time they differ essentially from the genuine Babylonian names of our texts.

The above-given list—into which a number of names have not been incorporated which probably belong to the same group—contains over a hundred names, occurring more or less frequently in our texts, which concerning their form have to be designated as Semitic but not Babylonian. It is true, we find compound and abbreviated names and hypocoristica (cf. especially Jadiḥ-ilu, Jadiḥum, Jadiḥatum), exactly as in genuine Babylonian names, but we find in this list only a few names with the most common of all Babylonian affixes -ja. On the contrary, we find nominal and verbal forms which differ essentially from those which we meet in the Babylonian names and roots which are not familiar to us from the Babylonian lexicon. The names of Babylonian deities are very rarely¹ found in this group of names. In their place we find only Dagan and, once, Ishtara. Besides, where the other names have the name of a god or a good Babylonian equivalent, we find the following elements in use: ammî, (ishhî), îši, izi (= îši, izi?), hammu, samu, sumu, samsu, zimirî.

Verbal forms occurring in them are jabnik (q, g), jadiḥ, jahbar, jahzar, jahzir, jakub, jamlîk, jaqar(?), jarbi, jarḥam, jasad(?), jashbi(?), jashub,² jap(w)i, eshub, zaduga.

Nominal forms are (ḥ)abdi, (ḥ)abdu, d(t)itana, zabti, ila, iluna, ḥad(t, ṭ)nu.

Finally we find hypocoristic formations uncommon to the Babylonian, namely, the forms ja''ûl and fu'âl.

The words zimirî, ishhî,² ammî, holding a place in these names, in which we would expect the name of a deity, can hardly be separated from the words עם, יתע, רמר, occurring in a similar position in South-Arabic names.

Sumu perhaps (but note the variant samu!) represents the South-Arabic סמה. Samsu corresponds to שמס in South-Arabic names. (H)abdu (עבד) is one of the most common elements in the Arabic personal names of all times, and Ishtara very probably is the rendering of עתתר, well known from South-Arabic names, where it usually is found in the shortened form עתת.

Alongside of these numerous similarities with the Arabic we find quite a number of parallels to our "West-Semitic" names in the Aramaic and Canaanitish provinces.³ Here we may compare:

¹ Also cf. the West-Semitic names Ilk-qatari, Hilprecht and Clay, B. E., Vol. IX, and Nashu-qatar(i), Johns, Doomsday Book, etc.

² The existence of names with Ishhî- can be concluded, I think, with certainty, from the hypocoristic name Ishhî-tija (cf. p. 18).

For a number of elements occurring in these foreign names, e.g., iz(s)i (iz(s)î?),¹ (a)*sad(t, t)*² (= jasad(t, t)?), jazi, etc., a satisfactory explanation is still wanting.

But, however this may be, the following must be admitted. We find a comparatively large number of subjects of the Babylonian ¹ Should this be עֶז, my strength? Cf. עֶז in the Phœnician names עֶזְבֶּל and עֶזְבֶּל and Pu. עֶזְבֶּל! [In addition to the suggestions offered by Dr. Ranke, I desire to call attention to the following: Apart from the hypocoristica A-za-nu, A-za-tum and Az(?)zi-ja-tum, better excluded from our present consideration, Dr. Ranke's list offers two elements, i-zi (i-ši) and jazi (in I-zi-ja-zi and Ia-zi-Dagan), which apparently belong closely together. The same two elements are known from two West-Semitic proper names published by Johns, Assyr. Deeds, A-du-na-i-zi (Variant GISH, i.e., îši, scarcely iz) and Ištar (or עֶזֶר)-ta-a-zi. From the writing i-ši (îši) it follows that the middle radical is שׁ (not י). The last radical was doubtless j, the first apparently a weak guttural. Hence I offer for comparison the verb חָצָה, occurring in the Biblical proper name חֲצִיָּאל or חֲצִיָּאל, which would correspond to a Babylonian Iáz(s)i-îli. Izi, corresponding to Sab. חֶט, "fortune," seems to have become a divine name, "Fortuna," in the same way as the West-Semitic גֶּר, "fortune," was used also for the "god of fortune." Cf. Zimmern, *K.A.T.*³, pp. 479f., and my note † to Clay, B. E., Vol. X, p. 54.

From what has been stated, it may be inferred that I separate the element ha-zi (in Shamash-ha-zi) from i-z(s)i. It is possible that this ha-zi, occurring only in one passage of the list published below, is an error of the scribe or copyist, as Dr. Ranke suggests. But in view of the West-Semitic names compound with חָה, "to see," which we meet in Johns, Assyr. Deeds (Ha-zi-AN, i.e., Ha-zi-îli (cf. Bibl. חֲצִיָּאל) or Ha-zi-an (cf. the writing Ha-zi-a-nu and Bibl. חֲצִיָּאֵן) and Ha-za-îlu = Bibl. חֲצִיָּאל, I am inclined to connect the ha-zi of Dr. Ranke's list with the latter root. A third root found in Johns, l.c., is עֶה, cf. A-zi-îlu (= Bibl. עֲזִיָּאל).—ED.]

² [I propose to read a-sad (root either חָסַד, found as an element in Hebrew and Safaitic proper names, cf. the Bibl. names חֲסִידָה, חֲסִידָה and the Saf. חָסִיד (Hāsīd), or, more probably, חָסִיד, cf. Pa. חָסִיד). The element ash-dum, used like a divine name, apparently must be separated from חָסַד, "mercy," in view of its being written constantly with sh. In all probability it is another (earlier?, cf. eshdu) writing for ishdi, "foundation," frequently occurring as an element in the list of Assyrian names given by Johns, Assyr. Deeds (cf. Ishdi-ahē (shu), Ishdi-Nabû, Ishdi-Harrāni, etc.), with which the names of the Hammurabi period have many features in common. Cf. also Pu. אֶשְׁדִּי.—ED.]

and it was a custom to refer to the deity in expressions like "my protection," "my help," "my uncle." We have to admit that of all Semitic languages known to us the Arabic stands nearest to this tongue, that has been preserved only in personal names.

Who were these foreigners, that have been designated by different scholars as Canaanites or Arabs or Amorites—who were they, and from what land did they come? We have seen that they were Semites, and have found that many of their names are similar to Arabic, some to Hebrew and Phenician, etc., names. Consequently to speak more definitely of Arabs or Canaanites would involve one in the same difficulties. We have apparently a mixture of elements known to us from the later Arabic as well as from the Canaan-

¹ The important recognition that ila in our names represents an Arabic ilah, I owe to a conversation with Mr. Pinches in London. It is not impossible that AN in West-Semitic names throughout should be pronounced ila. [As far as I can see (cf. Editorial Preface), there are three West-Semitic words for "god" in use at the time of the Hammurabi dynasty: ili, ila and iluha, precisely the same three words as are known from the West-Semitic proper names of the Murashû tablets. Cf. my remarks in Clay, B. E., Vol. X, p. XII f.—ED.]

² To these words we may add: jantîn instead of Bab. idinnam (cf. Jantîn-ilu, Bu. 88-294, IV, 22, l. 5), jashmah instead of Bab. ishme (cf. Ja-ash-ma-ah-î-el, C.B.M., 1352 : 17—time of Anmanila), jakbar (cf. Jakbari-ilu, M.A.P., 77 : 23, and Jakbarum, C.B.M., 1352 : 22) instead of Bab. rabi. For jantîn cf. the form [רַנִּין] quoted by Dr. Lidzbarski, Handbuch, p. 327.

ite languages. But we are in the fortunate position to know at least the name by which the Babylonians of that time called these foreign invaders. One of the tablets written under the reign of Zabium (Z4) is of especial interest for this question. It is a document in which two parties complain against each other before the judge about a certain piece of property, the case being finally decided in favor of one of the parties. The names of the disputants (the claimants are ʾBêlizunu, Napsânum and ʾMatatum, daughter of Izi-darê—the accused Majatum and Sumurah, children of Azaliʾa) show that their bearers belong to two "West-Semitic" families. Now the words by which the claim of the contending party is set aside by the judge are noteworthy, and, so far as I can see, as yet without parallel. They run as follows: ana warkiat ûmi ana eqli, bîti, anti, wardi u kirî sha Majatum u Sumurah—Bêlizunu, Napsânum, u Matatum mârât Izi-darê ishtu zikarim adi zinishtum mârê A-mur-ru-um ana Majatum u Sumurah ul eragamû—that is: For all future days—concerning field, house, maid-servant, man-servant and garden of M. and S.—B., N. and M., daughter of I.—men as well as women of the children of Amurru—shall not bring a complaint against M. and S. Now follows "judgment of the temple of Shamash in" and then the oath and the names of four judges and six witnesses, whose names, with two uncertain exceptions, are good Babylonian. From this passage we learn that the native Babylonians called these foreign cousins, who had become residents in their country, by the name of "mârê Amurru," i.e., "children of the Westland."

It would seem certain that the "Westland" was the west frontier of Babylonia proper. We therefore may safely assume that the land meant by this name included the whole country to the west of the Euphrates, up to the shore of Palestine.¹ Consequently we cannot be far from right if, in accordance with the views of

Professor Hommel and others following him, we use the term Western Semites for the foreign element in the Babylonian empire of the Hammurabi dynasty.

It is another question whether or not we are entitled to speak, as we did above, of an "invasion of Western Semites into Babylonia." One might assume (with Professor Jensen) that these men were only a small number of foreigners who here and there had settled in Babylonia. The comparatively large number of foreign names, most of which come from tablets found in the ruins of the one city of Sippar, might be quoted against this assumption.

But there are two other reasons which, if we are not altogether mistaken, raise the supposed invasion of West-Semitic tribes into Babylonia from a mere probability to a historical fact.

1. The first reason in support of this theory is the attaching of the Arabic affix -atum to genuine Babylonian name elements in order to form hypocoristic names like Nûratum, Ibnatum, Ibg(q)-atum. Since there seems to be no possibility of finding an explanation of this affix on proper Babylonian ground, we have identified it with the hypocoristic affix -t in Arabic names, and the fact that such an element was used by the Babylonians in the way above indicated of necessity presupposes that Western Semites lived among the Babylonians, and were more or less amalgamated with them. This view is supported by those cases in which the West-Semitic affix is added to the peculiar Babylonian one, or vice versa (cf. p. 17).

The two single cases in which the affix -atum is added to the name of a deity, ʾAjatum and Sinatum, deserve our special attention. Taking into consideration that an extensive material is already at our disposal, it is difficult to believe that other texts to be published later will furnish us with names like Mardukatum or Shamashshatum, etc. Alongside of ʾAjatum we find Ajatija, i.e., the second double-affix atija joined to Aja. This affix, in accordance with what we expect, being otherwise only found attached to West-Semitic root elements, should we have to conclude that Sin as well as Aja—both (Aja as consort of the Sungod) names of the highest deity of the Arabs, the moon—were originally imported to Babylonia from Arabia ?¹ This importation, it is true, must have taken place at a much earlier time. For in our list of names Aja and Sin are always found in connection with genuine Babylonian elements. The fact, however, that names containing the god Sin occur very frequently at Sippar, the centre of the cult of the Sungod, may perhaps be explained by the strong admixture of West-Semitic elements in the population.

2. The second reason in favor of an invasion of West-Semitic tribes in Babylonia before 2000 B.C. has been found, since Pognon, in the names of the rulers of the Hammurabi dynasty. Seeing a family of Western Semites through ten generations occupy the royal throne at Babylon, we must suppose that Western Semites in great number, either by hostile invasion or gradual immigration, had come to settle in Babylonia.

Now it is almost unnecessary to prove that Sumu-abi as well as Sumu-la-ilu and his descendants were Western Semites—if we designate at all the foreign Semitic element in Babylonia at that time as West-Semitic. From a mere glance at their names we learn that the majority of them have a non-Babylonian appearance.

A closer examination shows that they contain the very elements we have to claim as West-Semitic.

Ammî-zaduga, from which name Ammî-d(t)itana cannot be separated on account of the identity of the first element, has been quoted as the rendering of a South-Arabic עמזדק.

¹ Cf. on this Hommel, Aufs. u. Abhandl., p. 158, note. For another view, see H. Radau, The Creation Story of Genesis, I, p. 65, n. 6.

*Abi-eshuh*¹ apparently represents only a slight Babylonization² of Abi-jashuh, which corresponds to a South-Arabic אבי־השׁוּח.

The elements of Samsu-iluna, to which name Samsu-d(t)itana has to be attached, are both characteristic of West-Semitic origin (cf. pp. 29, 32).

In Sumu-abi and Sumu-la-ilu the element sumu points to West-Semitic origin, as is proven by the name Sumurah (= Sumu-erah, cf. Abdirah beside Abdi-arah and Abi-arah beside Abi-erah) compared with Zimri-erah.

That also Hammu-rabi belongs to this group is—beside the insufficient Babylonian etymology of hammu—shown by the name Sumu-hammu. Whether hammu and ammî (in Ammî-ditana and -zaduga) represent the same West-Semitic element is still doubtful.³ Rabi might (cf. the later translation by rapashu and cf. also the names Rabi-šilashu and Rapash-šili-Ea) be an

² For similar phenomena cf. Emutbalum beside Jamutbalum, eragam beside jaragam (both instead of genuine Babylonian iragam), and erah beside arah (= jarah).

³ In favor of this view may be quoted that Hammurabi's name once appears as Ammi-ram, and that the later scribe rendered both by kimtu. But it is not impossible that hammu is the Canaanitish word "family, people," or even the Katabanic god 𐤀𐤌, while ammî corresponds to an Arabic ٢٣, "my uncle." It is very much to be hoped that additional material will render beyond doubt the meaning of the name of this most remarkable figure in early Oriental history.

Arabic רחב, "wide."¹ But we have to keep in mind the possibility that it is a good Babylonian rabi, "great" ("the god 'Amm is great," cf. the incidental writing ^d*Hammu-rabi*!), and that the scribe who translated the name by Kintu-rapashtu did not understand it better than the scribe of the List of Kings understood the name Abi-eshuh.

The name Zab(i)um (or Ṣab(i)um), which like those of the preceding does not occur elsewhere in the Babylonian and Assyrian literature, has been compared with the South-Arabic זבא.² It is a shortened form, belonging to compound names like Zabi-MAR-TU. Per se we might also read Ṣabi-MAR-TU, "warrior of M.," but the word ṣabu is not found as an element in genuine Babylonian names.

A few words remain to be said about the names Abil-Sin and Sin-mubaliṭ, which have been used by Professor Jensen as a strong argument for his view, that the whole dynasty was of genuine Babylonian origin. Should these two names, in spite of all those which surround them, really suffice to justify such a far-reaching conclusion? No one can deny that they are purely Babylonian. But should there be no possible explanations for the fact that a king of Babylonia, although of West-Semitic blood, chose a genuine Babylonian name for one or the other of his sons—if we find so many examples for exactly the same custom among private persons of this time; and if later, among the rulers of the Cassite dynasty, we find the names Bēl-shum-iddina, Rammān-shum-iddina, Rammān-shum-ušur, etc., surrounded by Bitiliash, Kadashman-Harbe and Meli-Shiku?³

Thus we arrive at the conclusion that an unbiassed understanding of the personal names of the Hammurabi period forces us to assume that before 2000 B.C. West-Semitic tribes had settled in Babylonia, and that out of their midst those men arose, who from Hammurabi to Samsuditana ruled over the united Babylonian kingdom.

Before we turn to the name list itself, attention may be called to two facts which are of a special interest.

1. The elements of Babylonian personal names, the meaning of which we try to ascertain in the twentieth century A.D., were a puzzle even before the twentieth century B.C. to pupils of the Babylonian temple schools. It is true they did not have to concern themselves about the meaning of these elements, but they had to write them again and again, in order to become entirely familiar with this essential part of Babylonian contract tablets. Such exercises of young scribes of the school at Sippar have been published by Professor Scheil, in his Saison de fouilles à Sippar, pp. 40-44. They contain either full names or name elements. As Professor Scheil failed to recognize the latter ones, some of his translations are erroneous. Other elements are important for our reading or understanding of some of the names. Thus I may be allowed to call attention to the following cases. On p. 40: na-wi-ra-am, cf. the names beginning with namram, and Šizu-nâwirat. On p. 41: note bashti, translated rightly by Scheil, under the name elements, and cf. my note to bashtî in the list B 3; dilibti, perhaps better dilîlti, cf. Del., Hw., under ללל; AN-SHAK-NI, rather AN-KUSH-NI=šulûluni; atanashum, read atanah. On p. 42: kashida, read kâshid. In EN-DI-MU, occurring apparently on p. 43 as EN-DA-MU, we have perhaps EN-ZI-MU, cf. *bêl-na-bishti*ja(?) in my list; ribam, "increase!" (not "le quatrième"); ishtime, probably better ish-ti-gal; ma-hu-ur, rather ma-ku-ur?; ba-ni-ti, read ba-ash-ti?; mani, read bâni; etel, cf. etel-bt, etc. (not "il s'en alla"); lamazi, cf. Shamash-lamazi, etc. (not "pas suffisant"); Adata, most probably adalal; el-la-ti, note the phonetic writing, not yet found in names. On p. 43: as to abili (which, however, surely is not identical with awili) cf. Shamash-abili; bila', "fruit"(??), cf. Sin-bilah. On p. 44: note ibi and ibiq(!!) among verbal forms; Sin (no determinative!), read perhaps ennam; Ishme-Shamash(?), probably ishmeanni.

2. In connection with a study of the names of the Hammurabi period our attention is drawn once more to the personal names occurring in the so-called "Cappadocian" tablets. To the comparisons made by Delitzsch¹ and Hommel² we have now to add:

On the basis of this remarkable similarity of the "Cappadocian" personal names with those of the Hammurabi dynasty, Dr. Hommel's conclusion that the former go back to the early Babylonian time appears to be highly probable.⁹ For the solution of this most interesting problem a thorough reinvestigation of these tablets, with the helps now at our command, and an early publication of all similar texts not yet generally accessible, is greatly desirable.

⁹ [As early as 1895 I had reached the conclusion that the paleographical evidence offered by nearly 100 Cappadocian tablets which I had gathered in connection with several trips through Western Asia, points to the second half of the third millennium as the time when these tablets were written.—Ed.]

II. TEXTS FROM WHICH THE NAMES HAVE BEEN TAKEN.

The personal names appearing in the subsequent list have been collected from the texts of the following publications:

- J. N. Strassmaier, Die altbabylonischen Verträge aus Warka (in Verhandlungen des V. Orientalisten-Congresses, Berlin, 1882, first half, pp. 315ff.).
- Th. G. Pinches, Inscribed Babylonian Tablets in the Possession of Sir Henry Peek, London, 1888, Nos. 1, 13, 14.
- F. E. Peiser, Texte juristischen und geschäftlichen Inhalts (in Schrader's Keilinschriftliche Bibliothek, Vol. IV, pp. 8-49).
- B. Meissner, Beiträge zum altbabylonischen Privatrecht, Leipzig, 1893.
- Th. G. Pinches, Vols. II, IV, VI and VIII of Cuneiform Texts from Babylonian Tablets in the British Museum, London, 1896, '98, '99.
- L. W. King, Letters and Inscriptions of Hammurabi, London, 1898-1900.

The names occurring in the early Babylonian texts from Sippar, preserved in the Imperial Ottoman Museum at Constantinople, and partly published by Professor Scheil in Une saison de fouilles à Sippar, have not been included in my list, as Scheil apparently does not aim to present a critical edition of all these texts. Besides, I learn from Professor Hilprecht that a complete publication of the Sippar tablets in the Ottoman Museum is being prepared by Professor Thomas Friedrich, of Innsbruck. Occasional references, however, to some of the personal names occurring in Scheil's publication will be found in my notes on the name elements.

The long quotations commonly used have been avoided. In order to enable the reader to recognize at a glance to which king a text belongs, I have introduced the following abbreviations:

Sa = Sumu-abi	H = Hammu-rabi
Si = Sumu-la-ilu ¹	Si = Samsu-iluna
I = Immerum	Ae = Abi-eshu ²
Z = Zab(ê)um	Ad = Ammî-ditâna
AS = Abil-Sin	Az = Ammî-zaduga
Sm = Sin-mubali ²	Sd = Samsu-ditâna

These abbreviations are, as a rule, followed by at least two figures, the first referring to the order in which I quote the texts (cf. the Index, pp. 45-56); the second, third, etc., to the line or lines in which the name is found. A chronological arrangement was unfortunately impossible, as a great number of texts, although dated by the name of one of the kings, cannot be assigned to a definite year.

Twenty-one undated texts have been marked as U 1, U 2, etc. They have been included in the list, because different reasons² make it evident or at least highly probable that they belong to the reign of one of the kings of the Hammurabi dynasty.

An exception to the general arrangement has only been made with regard to the names occurring in the letters of Hammurabi and his successors. These being already compiled in Dr. King's ¹ The tablet Bu. 91-704 (VI, 36), mentioning the name Su-ma-ilu in the oath, has not been included among the Sumu-la-ilu texts. If Suma-ilu really should be equal to Sumu-la-ilu, our understanding of the name (cf. list B 3) would be supported.

² Some examples may be given for the explanation of these reasons: As to U 1, cf. l. 27 ^f*Sanakratum* d. of Musalimum with I 6 : 27 ^f*Sanakratum* d. of Musalimim; as to U 5, cf. l. 17 NIN-A-ZU ^f*tupsharratu* with Z 2 : 16, NIN-A-ZU appearing as last witness; as to U 11, cf. l. 16, Shumu-UH-KI imhurâma with Sm 10 : 11, Shumu(?) -UH-KI ikshudâma. Shumu(?) -UH-KI, whose judgment is required, is clearly the same person in either case. Besides, the two tablets are apparently written by the same scribe. As to U 15, cf. lines 10-16 with H 20 : 21-27, where the same witnesses appear in exactly the same order, etc., etc. U 21 must, according to line 36, belong to Si, Ad or Sd.

general index (cf. Vol. III of his work quoted above), I simply refer to this index by adding a K to the above abbreviations. Thus, e.g., Ae-K would mean that the name in question occurs in one of the letters of Abi-eshuh published by Dr. King.

A complete index of all the other texts, with reference to their number of registration and to the place of their publication, will be found preceding the name list.

The question whether the texts of Immerum and Anmanila(?) should be included in the list, has been carefully considered. I finally decided against Anmanila(?) and in favor of Immerum. The latter certainly was a contemporary of Sumu-la-ilu. The proof for this is found in the tablet I 1, in which both names appear side by side in the oath. It is very probable that in Sippar, during a certain time, Immerum held a very prominent position, subject, however, to Sumu-la-ilu. Compare on the whole question the recent discussion of Dr. Daiches (Altbabylonische Rechtsurkunden, p.22ff.). The same is true of Bungun(?)-ila, of whose reign no tablet has yet been published.¹ It seems that, at certain times, a sort of viceroy held sway at Sippar beside the king Sumu-la-ilu who had his residence at Babylon. This viceroy may have been a religious official of high rank, perhaps a patesi (this was suggested to me by Prof. Hilprecht), but up to the present time this question cannot yet be settled on account of the little evidence at hand. Perhaps later excavations will show a similar state of affairs in other cities of Sumu-la-ilu's realm. Thus far it is only certain that Immerum as well as Bungun(?)-ila belonged to the period of the first dynasty of Babylon. This is not true, however, of Anmanila(?).² The tablets mentioning his name which have been published, point, from paleographical reasons, to a time near the beginning of the Ham-

¹ If both had been usurpers, we would hardly expect the reverent invocation of the name of their rival, Sumu-la-ilu, in legal documents written in their city.

² The reading of the name is still uncertain, cf. Daiches, l.c., p. 33-37.

murabi dynasty. But none of the persons occurring in them can be identified with those of the other documents, and consequently it cannot yet be decided whether or not Anmanila(?) was connected with the first dynasty of Babylon.¹

It seems to me very probable that he was a ruler at Sippar before this city was incorporated into the Babylonian empire by the Hammurabi dynasty.

¹ The statement of Mr. Pinches (The Old Testament in the Light of the Historical Records of Babylonia and Assyria, p. 154) referring to the age of Anmanila(?) must be abandoned on a closer examination of the passage. In the tablet in question we have to read Akaja már A-ḫi-ma-ra-az instead of már A-ḫi-ma már sharri!

¹[As Dr. Ranke has indicated, the meaning of Be-el-a-nu-um offers certain difficulties. However, is the material adduced in the "List" of this book and in his Dissertation sufficient to prove that anu(m) without the determ. îlu has the meaning of "god" in the proper names treated? The most natural explanation of this class of names is to interpret them as hypocoristica in ân, like Awîlâni, Samânnum, Zabânnum, etc., discussed by him on p. 13, above. The fact that Ilî(NI-NI)-a-num occurs alongside of I-la-nu-um does not decide the question in favor of anum, "god" (for cf. Ha-ma-ri-îlî(AN-MESH)-î-a = Ham-ari-îlîa (B. E., Vol. X, p. XV). It only shows that NI-NI and AN-MESH occasionally were pronounced îl, in accordance with an increasing tendency to drop the final vowel in îlî, abî, ahî, ammi, etc. (cf. my remarks in B. E., Vol. X, pp. X, ff), and that Ilî-a-num accordingly must be read Ilânnum—Ed.]

B. LIST OF ELEMENTS, CONTAINED IN THE PERSONAL NAMES.¹1. NAMES OF GODS, PRECEDED BY THE DETERMINATIVE ilu, "GOD."

- dA-ba-a*, A-ba?-a (perhaps Cassite deity, cf. dIbiri), in the names Warad-Abá and Abá(?)-rabi. the name fAM-AN-NA-lamazi. Annunitum, see dNunitum.
*dAja*² (written dA-a; once—H 102:20 —without determinative!, consort of Shamash at Sippar, cf. Harper, Code H. 2:28; cf. also *dSHÉ-NIR-DA*³), cf. the feminine names under Aja, and fAmat-A., fAwát-A., Bár-A., fErishít-A., Ibku-A., Ilát-bí-A., KÁsha-A., Piri-A., Sha-A., fShát-A., Sheriq-A., and fAna-A.-uzní,⁴ and cf. bélti, List 2. (dA-nu, only⁵ in the meaning "god," "deity," cf. Diss., p. 20, and cf. dA-nu and anum, List 3). dAshur (or dAshir?, written dA-USAR, cf. the dKAL of *duA-USAR*⁶, Code H. 4:56ff., and cf. Jastrow, "The God Ashur," Journal of the Amer. Or. Soc., Vol. XXIV, pp. 282-311), in the name A.-idinnam.
dA-?, in the name Nábi-dA-?
dBa-lum (? cf. Ba?balum, List 2).
dBa-ú (goddess, consort of ZA-MÁ-MAM-AN-NA (probably a goddess), in MÁ, III R. 68:63d), in the name

¹ An f preceding a name or name element indicates a feminine name.² Cf. the writing dA-ja, Scheil, Saison, p. 136, No. 576. For a similar orthographic interchange of (a)a and ja cf. da-a-a-ni (H 62:5) with Shamash-da-ja-an, etc., Már-Ba-a-a with Már-Ba-ja, A-ja-ru (Scheil, Saison, p. 135) with the usual writing A-a-ru of the second month. Cf. also the name of the princess fAjalatum (apparently = 𐎶𐎶𐎵), written—with "Spielerei"—dA-a-la-tum; and the feminine name A-ja-tum, which evidently is identical with fA-a-tum.³ Other epithets of the goddess Aja are kalátum, "the bride" (cf. Scheil, Saison, p. 136, and the name fAmat-kalátum, Bu. 91-316 (VIII, 46), l. 26), and bélti, "the Lady," cf. List 2.⁴ The name Aja-kalabu (K.B., IV, p. 15, l. 12b) has to be abandoned. The original has Aja ka-la-tim(?), and it is no personal name at all.⁵ But cf. the name AN-nu-um-abí (= Anum-abí, "A. is my father," or "(the) god is my father"?), Bu. 91-707 (VI, 37), l. 16.—For Anu as being worshipped at Uruk alongside of dIshtar, cf. Code H. 2:46. For Anu as father of dNIN-KAR-RA-AG, ib., 44:51.—It is a question whether dAnum in personal names of the later time (cf. e.g., Hilprecht and Clay, B.E., Vol. IX, and Clay, B.E., Vol. X) was considered as a word for "god," "deity," or as the name of a special god. Cf. the name Atamar-dAnussu, Clay, B.E., Vol. X.

UR-Bau,¹ which occurs only in the name of a street sûq-UR-Bau.

dBel (written dEN-LIL, *dEN-LIL-LA*², Be-el(?), consort of dNIN-LIL, worshipped in the temple E-KUR at Nippur, cf. Harper, Code H. 1 : 46ff., 42 : 81ff.), cf. the masculine names under Bêl, Ârik-idi-B., Ashrî-B., Awât-B., Awil-B., Damqi-B., Etel-bi-B., Ibi-B., Ibni-B., Idin-B., Imdi-B., Imgur-B., Imlik-B., Kâsha-B., Libit-B., Ludlul-B., Manum-kima-B., Nâbi-B., Warad-B., Iti-B.-ishki, Itti-B.-qinnî, and cf. Bêl-anum(?).

dBe-el?-tim, in the name Warad-Bêl-tim(?).

dBu-ne-ne, dBu-ni-ni (companion of Shamash, worshipped especially at Sippar, cf. Jastrow, Religion, p. 175), cf. the masculine names under Bunini, and Idin-B., Lid-ish B., Warad-B.

dDa-gan (West Semitic deity, cf. Introduction, p. 27. Hammurabi calls himself—Code III, 4 : 22—a “warrior(?) of Dagan, his creator”), in the names Idin-Dagan(?) and Naḥum-Dagan.³

dDa-mu (goddess, rendered by Gula in names, VR., 44 : 19c, 49c. Mentioned often in religious texts, cf. e.g., Martin, Textes rel., p. 70 : 7.8, and Labartu Series, Z.A., XVI, p. 158), in the names D.-GAL-ZU, Awil-D., *Idin-D.*⁴

E-a, dE-a (only in the names Etel-bi-dEa and Qishtî-dEa, from Ammî-zaduga's time),⁵ dEN-KI (only in dEN-KI-HE-U-TU = Ea-lû-

¹ Instead of Bau-ila, Diss., p. 17, n. 3, we have to read Zû-ila!

² For the pronunciation cf. the writing Shamash-dEN-LIL-ilê beside Shamash-bêl(EN)-ilê.

⁴ Cf. also Damu-ellatê, M.A.P. 15 : 5, D.-nâsir, Bu. 91-286 (VI, 17), Col. V, Obv., l. 16; Ur-dingir-Da-mu and Gin-dingir-Da-mu, Reisner, Telloh.

¹ In the names dElāli-bāni, Bu. 88-295 (IV, 23), ll. 3 and 5, and Warad-dElāli, M.A.P. 53:11.

² In the text Bu. 88-585 (IV, 34) the writing dGI-BIL (l. 10) is found. Cf. the ideogram GI-BIL-LÁ for ṭipāru and napāḫu and the Assyrian loan word gib(p)illu, Leander, Lehnwörter, p. 10.

³ From the passages H 44:16 and 36 we get the impression that the scribe considered Ḫammu to be a god. Else we would have to assume that ilu(AN) stands before the name of the (deified) king in the oath formula and in the date, which would be without parallel in the Hammurabi dynasty.

it are almost without exception written Sumerian—it might have been merely an ideographical writing of Sin. In favor of Nannar, however, it must be said: (1) dSHESH-KI is rendered by Nannar, IV R. 9:3a-17a; V R. 52:23a. (2) dSHESH-KI and dSHESH-UD, although interchanging with one another, are never found in personal names as variants of dEN-ZU or Sin (XXX). (3) Warad-Sin, the son of Warad-Nannar, would be the only case among all these names in which father and son would bear an identical name (cf. p. 5), if we assume that SHESH-KI was to be read Sin.—In favor of the reading Sin it might be remarked that (1) dSHESH-KI is rendered by Sin, IV R. 1:29b; 5:59a, etc. (2) The reading Sinatum of the name dSHESH-KI-TUM still appears to me more suggestive than any other possible one (Scheil, Saison, p. 117, l. 21, reads Uritum).—It is hardly necessary to assert that dSHESH-KI and dEN-ZU are names of one and the same deity, namely the moongod. The question is only whether or not they were pronounced differently in the personal names. In the passage Si 25:8, which seems to refer to the temple of the moongod, we find dSHESH-KI and dEN-ZU as variants.

¹ Cf. ^dMAR-TU. The reading of this god in early Babylonian time is not certain. Most Assyriologists read at present Adad. As almost all the elements in our list, which are composed with his name, show genuine Babylonian features, I prefer to keep the reading Rammân until we have evidence against it on Babylonian ground. Cf. on the question Zimmern, *K.A.T.*³, p. 444. For his occurrence in personal names cf. my Diss., p. 14f. Of special interest is the writing ^dRa-ma-a-nu-um (alongside of ^dAshratum) on an apparently early Bab. seal cylinder in the Hermitage at St. Petersburg (publ. by Sayce, Z.A. VI, p. 161). Cf. also ĪQīshī-Rammân (ib. p. 162), Dingir-Im-ra?, Reisner, Telloh.

² This reading has been adopted where we formerly read dBU. From a careful examination of the originals I learned that the apparent sign BU has to be separated into its components she and rum. Diss., p. 17 and n. 2, as well as M.A.P., p. 132, have to be corrected accordingly. For Shêr(u) in names cf. Johns, Dooms-day Book; Johns, Deeds, and Hilprecht in Clay, B.E., Vol. X, p. XIV.

³ Cf. also King, Creation, p. 118, where he seems to have taken the place of Bēl-Marduk, who slays the dragon—supposing that p. 120, l. 1, we have to restore ana dSUH (cf. n. 1 and the similarity of the SUH and NINNI signs!).

⁴ Name of a man from Umliašh! The same name seems to occur in the letter Bu. 91-315 (VI, 19), l. 2. Montgomery (Briefe, p. 16) reads Nabū, but it is hardly the AG sign, cf. the same in the letter Bu. 88-278 (IV, 19), l. 10. Cf. also Ikún-bi-Tishhu(?), Strassm., Warka, 24: 6 (time of Rim-Sin).

¹ Or Dùmashshittum? Cf. Winckler in Der alte Orient, 4, 4, second ed., p. 10. Cf. also E-ul-mash-a-a, Strassm., Camb., 107: 10 | 437: 14.

² Or Urash, and of Semitic etymology?, cf. Radau, The Monist, Vol. XIV, p. 82, n. 8. This god (not ÛR=Nabû!) appears also in the date of the twentieth year of Ammi-diána, cf. Ad 15: 17 and Scheil, Saison, p. 137.

³ But cf. dUr-ki-tum, Martin, Textes rel., p. 42, l. 8; 28, l. 3, which seems to be a name of Ishtar of Ninive. Cf. also the Assyrian feminine names, beginning with Urkitum, Johns, Deeds.

⁴ The reading ÛR of the NITA sign (cf. M.A.P., p. 96) is corroborated by a passage in H 42. Here the name of a place written dDungi-ER-KI-PAD-DA (ll. 6.21.29.36) or dDungi-ER!-PAD-DA (l. 42) on the inner tablet, appears in the writing dDungi-NITA-RA-PAD-DA on the case (ll. 6.36.42). Now both signs, ER as well as NITA, have the value URU, and as ER besides has the value UR, we conclude that NITA, being prolonged by RA, also had this value. For ER having the value UR cf. also C.B.M. 1403: 12 (time of Immerum), where the well-known formula UKUR-MULU-MÛLU-RA appears in the writing MULU-MULU-ER, i.e., MULU-MULU-ÛR. Cf. the well-known LUGAL-A-NI-IR for LUGAL-A-NI-RA.

⁵ The god ÛR-RA, who until Hammurabi's time never is written with the determinative ilu, appears in the Code H. (2: 69ff.) as god of Cutha. All scholars who so far publicly dealt with the Code have, so far as I can see, failed to recognize this fact. Instead of introducing a new word nitrûru into the Babylonian lexicon we have to read sha ÛR-RA ru-shu ushakshidu nismazu, "whose wishes the red shining U. fulfills," cf. Nabopolassar B. (ed. Abel-Winckler), l. 12f., and Hilprecht, O.B.I., part I, No. 84, Col. I, l. 25f. The fifth variant of the ush, mit sign, given by Harper, Code H., on plate 88, which differs considerably from

ilê (?, written AN)- ra-bu-tim ("the great	ili , see ilu . ilî (written NI-NI), ³ i-li — only in Itâr-ilî —, genitive ilî(NI-NI)-ja

¹ It is not impossible that also in other West Semitic names like Jadaḥ-AN, Jahzar-AN, etc., we ought to read ila instead of ilu.

² Cf. the names Gâl-dingîr-dingîr, Reisner, Telloh, Ardi-ilu-rabû and Ilu-rabû-nâdin, Clay, B.E., Vol. X, Mannu-kt-ilu-rabû, II R. 63: 3a.

³ The element NI-NI is found very frequently in these names. Its pronunciation as ilî (not ilu, Delitzsch, B.A., IV, p. 487) is ascertained by writings like NI-NI-i-ma-abî (beside NI-NI-ma-abî), Sin-NI-NI-i, Bu. 91-654 (VIII, 16), l. 4 (cf. Shêrum-, Zabium-NI-NI), and I-lî-l-?-Shamash, Scheil, Swison, p. 133, S. 287, verso, ll. 1.7 (cf. NI-NI-?-Shamash in my list). Cf. also M.A.P., p. 93. As to the meaning, we find it corresponding to the singular as well as to the plural of ilu, "god." Cf. Shamash-bêl-NI-NI, "Sh. is the lord of the gods," and Shêrum-NI-NI, "Sh. is (my) god." How is this to be explained? If NI-NI is a "graphische Spielerei" for î-lî (Jensen, K.B., III, p. 125, n. 18), how about NI=ilî in the syllabary S^a? If NI was a rare writing for ilu, "god," and NI-NI the plural of this (Del., Hw., p. 59b), how do we account for NI-NI used as singular? Perhaps we have to explain these facts as follows: The sign NI at some remote time had the meaning "god," of which the statement in S^a that NI=ilî is the only remainder. NI-NI, according to Sumerian usage, designated the plural "gods," cf. NI-NI as variant of AN-AN, VR. 34, Col. II, 52. "Gods" could be pronounced either ilê or ilâni, of which ilê in earlier times was so much preferred that NI-NI merely became a picture of the sound ilê (or ilî, ili). Thus we could explain the threefold usage of NI-NI in the names of this time:

(1) As plural, e.g., Shamash-bêl-NI-NI, to be read ilê.

(2) As nominative or vocative singular with the suffix of the first person singular, e.g., NI-NI-ishmeanni or Adi-mati-NI-NI, to be read ilî.

(3) As genitive singular or nominative in the construct state, e.g., Sha-NI-NI (-shu) or NI-NI-awilim-rabi, to be read ilî.

The cases in which NI-NI is used for the nominative in the absolute state (as Damqi-NI-NI-shu, Idin-NI-NI-shu, Nâbi-NI-NI-shu, Tâkil-NI-NI-shu, Ziqîr-NI-NI-shu(?)) cannot decide against NI-NI being pronounced ilî. We have to read Idin-ilishu, etc., and to compare the interchanging use of the u and i cases, especially in this time (cf. Diss., p. 26). For the whole phenomenon we refer to the names with AN^{pl} in Hilprecht and Clay, B.E., Vol. IX, read there ilî (cf. p. 19)—but cf. Clay, B.E., Vol. X, p. 12f, and Hilprecht, ib., p. IXff.

³ There is no adequate reason, at the present state of our knowledge, why ilu, "(the) god" in these names, could not refer to a special god—the protecting deity of the child or of the name giver—just as well as ilī, "my god," and ilushu, "his god." At all events this whole problem ought to be more thoroughly investigated and decided before far-reaching conclusions could be drawn from these names as to the development of monotheistic conceptions in early Babylonia (cf. especially Delitzsch, Babel und Bibel, 31.-35. Tausend, pp. 45f. and 73f., where it has to be noted that the names "Ilu-amranni" and "Ilu-tūram" have to be read Ilī-, "my god," according to my explanation of NI-NI). ⁵ Elements forming the first part of a name are followed, elements forming the second part preceded, by a hyphen. In case a word occurs as first and second element, it is preceded and followed by the hyphen. Elements, which in my name list occur only in shortened names, have been enclosed in round brackets.

¹ A-NE in our names has been rendered by a-bil, unless a-wi-il is found as variant (which is the case only in the name Awil-MAR-TU). Consequently it must be kept in mind that abil eventually may have to be corrected into awil. Cf., however, the writing A-NE for "son," Sm 31 : 1 and H 98 : 8, the variants a-bil and a-bi-il in the name Abil-kubi, and Daiches, Rechtsurkunden, p. 66f. The view of Dr. Daiches that abil is found only in connection with a distinct deity is not quite correct. Cf. besides H 63 : 27 (where no reason can be given why something should have to be supplemented) the name Abil-ili, Bu. 91-286 (VI, 15), Col. II, Obv., l. 10, but cf. the note to ihu in List 2. In writing abil, not apil, we merely follow the Babylonian orthography, without venturing at any definite conclusion as to the etymology of this word; cf. Leander, Lehnwörter, p. 29. Finally, it must be kept in mind, that in some names beginning with abil we might have to recognize the word âbil, "he brings," which we find as second element in the names.

⁷ Cf. the name Dîtânu-shar, Z.A., XII, p. 340. The reading -satana adopted by a number of Assyriologists has to be abandoned definitely. The sign DI in the Semitic texts of this time never has the phonetic value sa. The passages quoted by Meissner in M.A.P., p. 5, in which he reads sa-ta-na, do not count against this. As I learned from Dr. Messerschmidt, who was kind enough to send me a copy of every one of these passages, they all give the sign dî, not sa. For dîtanu as the foreign name of a strong animal living in the mountains cf. Jensen, K.B., VI, p. 311f. From Br. 8884 and 8887 we learn that it has the same ideogram as ⁴ The explanation of idinnam as imperative (Diss., p. 29 and n. 4), although formally possible, has been abandoned. It is true that the präterit in the texts of this time usually is written iddin(am), but idinnam also occurs, apparently supported by pausal position. Cf. the instructive passage in AS 7 (ll. 25-30), where idinnam (in pause) and iddinam (in a relative clause) immediately follow each other. At the end of a phrase a certain emphasis causes the accent to move on, and the same is true with words which occur as elements in names, since these per se are of an emphatic character. Cf. the examples, Introduction, p. 9. In this connection it has to be remarked that idinnam so far is found only as second element.—Idinnam thus having been secured as a form of the präterit, we prefer to take it as such, since präterital forms in our names are by far more numerous than imperatives (cf. ibi). That iddinam and idinnam not always were strictly distinguished in the indicated way is shown by Code H. 40 : 14 and 29, where both forms are used in relative sentences. Idinnam and MA-AN-SUM have not yet been found as variants in names of this time, but cf. V R. 44 : 16c, d. Cf. also the abbrev. name Ma-an-sum, Reisner, Telloh.

⁹ The writing Ilu-bê (not ga!) alongside of Ilu-ka shows that the latter one has to be considered as Ilu-KA or Ilu-bê. The question whether the Babylonians said Il-bê or Ilu-bê still remains open, the name dA-nu-bê-dNIN-SHAU, however, speaking in favor of the latter possibility. At the same time it must be kept in mind that the names with AN-bê perhaps throughout were pronounced Anu-bê, cf. ilu in this list. It seems that the suffix of the second person was not used in personal names of this time. This is not surprising, as the same is the case, so far as I can see, throughout early Semitic nomenclature. Thus we have Etel-bê instead of Etelka- (Daiches, l.c., p. 38), Ikûn-bê instead of Ikânka- (M.A.P., passim). Instead of Shamash-iluka (Diss., p. 25) we have to read Sh-AN-KUSH, i.e., Sh.-sulûlî.

⁴ The ah (or a') sign is uncertain. In l. 36 of the same tablet it is made differently(!).

⁵ In the name Jah(?)w(p)i-ilu. This name is uncertain as regards its reading, pronunciation and meaning, and therefore not very well fit to be the bearer of far-reaching conclusions. That we should have to find in it the name of the Israelitic god יְהוָה (which even on Israelitic ground never appears unabbreviated in personal names) seems to me very improbable, even supposing that the reading Jahwi-ilu were beyond doubt.

⁹ This element belongs to the oldest ones occurring in Babylonian personal names. As to the reading, we can at present only say that it most certainly was not read kasha. The reason why we still transliterate it Kāsha (following Dr. Daiches), is that in the later part of the Hammurabi dynasty its first part was made exactly like the KA sign (cf. e.g., Sm 24 : 5, Si 66 : 5, 69 : 17). In the earlier documents, however (e.g., AS 6 : 8, Sm 12 : 17), we clearly recognize that it is the KA sign with another sign inscribed. The passages I 5 : 5.21.24 show that this inscribed sign was SA. So the element would be SŪ-sha. This appears quite often as first element in the names of Reisner's Tempelurkunden von Telloh. and Golénischeff, Tabl. Capp., No. 6, l. 20 (cf. p. 40). In the obelisk of Manishtusu (ed. Scheil) we find a number of names beginning with Karibu-sha, according to Scheil's transliteration. The first sign is KA with inscribed SHU (Br. 820ff.), and they can hardly be separated from our SŪ-sha names. But which is the connecting link, and how do we have to read and to understand these names? Z.A., XII, p. 332, we find names beginning with SUB(KA + KU)-sha; is this a third group, or is their form due to an error of the copyist?—That these KĀsha-names have to be separated from the Awāt-(= KA) names is apparent from a comparison of passages like H 42 : 55^a and 65^a, I 5 : 14 and 21. Cf. however the Cassite name KĀ-Ishtar. Radau (History, pp. 261 f. and 438) reads these names IP-SHA-, following Scheil, and is inclined to consider SHA as the genitive particle. Hommel (cf. Grundriss, p. 94, n. 2) reads Shubsha-.

plural.—Since we have not yet found a single variant of SHU and gi-mil in names of the Hammurabi time, it must be kept in mind that SHU eventually might have been read shû, "belonging to." Note, for this, the name Shû(?)-kubim beside îShât-kubi, but cf. kubi, List 2. Cf. also the names beginning with Shu (gimil) in Scheil, Manishtusu and Reisner, Telloh. (Diss., p. 10) holds good, although we read Ṣi-ir in H 100 : 20. The early Babylonian scribes sometimes wrote the sign ir when ni clearly had been intended. Cf. e.g., Bu. 91-685 (IV, 22), l. 3, where we find Shamash-ṣulūluni written Sh.-AN-KUSH-ir. Vice versa they wrote occasionally ni for ir, cf. e.g., Z 7 : 2 and Az 10 : 6.8.21.

³ For ushêpi, from נשׁפּי.

⁴ God has given a second child and doing so doubled the number of children; or: God has given twins and thus doubled the act of his giving. The name Nabû-ushanni (II R. 64 : 35a), although standing among a number of imperative names, may be compared. The roots שׁנך I and II, Del., Hw., p. 674, have to be contracted into one, meaning originally "to be double." The Piel means "to make double, to repeat," or "to make different, to change." Cf. the German word "der andere" in the two meanings "the second" and "the other (different) one." Shuteshnat, III R. 65 : 42b, 43b (quoted Del., Hw., p. 675a) refers to a monstrous and consequently ominous double formation of the legs of the new-born colt.

⁵ Cf. also the name Ilî-uṣranni, M.A.P. 61 : 15.

⁶ Cf. also the name Uṣur-dMalik, Bu. 91-408 (VI, 30), l. 19.

These names apparently refer to an agreement between the deity and its worshipper. The latter gives or promises something, and the god, in return, pledges his word that he will grant a child. Names like Shamash-wadam-uṣur, Shamash-pija-uṣur, etc., do not seem to allow of a different explanation. For a similar agreement between god and the worshipper, cf. e. g. Genesis 28 : 20ff. The names Uṣur-awât-., Uṣur-bi-., etc., may be explained in the same way, comparing the abbrev. name Uṣur-wadam (-Shamash, or similar). But we also may take them as an address to the child "keep, fulfill the word of. . . ." (cf. the address to the child in names like Ana-Sh-lîzi, -têr, etc.), a possibility which seems to be strengthened by the name Uṣur-awâzu. Cf. also etel-bî.

⁵ Cf. the name Zīr-ilīshu, "Seed of his god," Bu. 91-755 (VIII, 38), l. 8.

⁶ Cf. Zīq(k)ir-bī-Shamash and Watar-bī-Shamash, apparently as variants of the name of the same slave, Scheil, Saison, p. 99. The fact that both names would have the meaning "Lofty, exalted is the word of Shamash" may have caused the error of the scribe. It seems unlikely that the slave was called with either name interchangeably. Cf. also the abbrev. names Zīq(k)rum, fZikurtum, and the name Zīq(k)ar-Su, Scheil, Manishtusu.

⁷ Cf. the name Zintum, Scheil, Manishtusu.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

- p. 2, l. 13. Unless we have to consider here the name Shamash-hâzirum (beside Shamash-hâzir), and the names in which an i is found attached to the participle, cf. âziri, hâziri, dâm(i)qi(?), mâlik(k)i, in the 3d list of elements.
- p. 6 and n. 1. That the names beginning with Warad- have to be considered as abbreviated ones appears from the name Zanqum-warad-Sîn, the reading and meaning of which became clear to me only when reading the last proofs.
- p. 8, n. 2. Cf., however, the personal names Dingir-En-lil-lal, Dingir-Dun-gi in Reisner, Telloh; Ilu-NIN-KAR, in Scheil, Manishtusu, and Cassite Ishtarû.
- p. 13, l. 15. Read: cf. Ilûza, instead of: cf. Ilûzatum. The latter, feminine, name (I-lu-za-tum) does not appear in my list, but is found in the undated text Bu. 91-356 (II, 30), l. 29.
- p. 13, l. 6. In support of my view concerning the origin of the hypocoristic affix -ja the following may be said: The most common affix forming hypocoristica in the early Babylonian Telloh tablets (cf. Reisner, Telloh, Index of masculine names) is -mu, this being at the same time the nominal suffix of the first person sing. in Sumerian. Thus we find Ab-ba-mu, Ad-da-mu (cf. Abija), Al-la-mu, Urû-mu, Da-da-mu (cf. Dâdija?), Dingir-UD-mu (? cf. Shamshija?), Lul-a-mu (cf. Shêlibija), Sib-mu, etc. Another hypocor. affix in these names seems to be -ni (cf. -shu in the names of the Hammurabi period? Cf. p. 19, n. 1).

- p. 82. Etel-bí-Ishtar and Etel-bí-Marduk, with Nagel (B.A. IV, p. 439, l. 12, etc., but cf. Delitzsch, ib., p. 486f.), instead of King's Enuka- or Enubi-, respectively. The nu and be (tel) signs in the texts of this period appear sometimes to be made exactly alike, and I feel sure that, on the basis of the entire material, Dr. King will abandon his former reading.

- p. 117. To Kukú-a add: cf. Ku-ku-a, Reisner, Telloh, and perhaps KU-KU, Scheil, Manishtusu.

- p. 129. Nannar-idinnam No. 11 add: cf. Sin-idinnam No. 53.—Nannar-SHU-ME-EN. Professor J. D. Prince translates this name "Nannar is the hand," meaning "Nannar is the powerful one," and compares Br. 7069. If he is right, Nannar-SHU-ME-EN might be a Sumerian writing for the name Sin-emûgi.
- p. 138. Rammân-rîm-ilê No. 1, after 14 add: (written IM-RI, by error of scribe!).
